

Having worked close to the executives of Telcos and AT&T in my career I know personally of the ignorance and arrogance these companies expressed internally when it comes to "real" creative innovation of the networks. I fear the current FCC Chairman demonstrates the same lack of imagination in what the web really is all about based on the views he has expressed. I support the comments presented to the FCC by Dave Burstein of DSL Reports.